

THE THREE FACES OF RABIN: MUSIC-ART-LEGACY

The Three Faces of Rabin: Music - Art - Legacy drew a sold-out crowd to the Bernard Milken Jewish Community Campus for an evening featuring an address by Yuval Rabin, son of Yitzhak and Lea; the mixed media artwork of Shalom, Haver in its only Southern California stop; and composer Aaron Zigman's five-movement Rabin performed by the 62-piece Los Angeles Jewish Symphony.

Ably chaired by Gerri and Paul Hinkes, Amy and Gary Dubin, this United Jewish Fund Campaign event was made possible through the generosity of the following patrons who purchased artwork created and donated by 60's pop artist and neo-expressionist Peter Max: Kaye & Fred Bernstein, Julianne & Michael Edelstein, Janet & Jake Farber, Paula & Milt Hoffman, Jeff Kaplan, Lisa & Tom Miller, Judy & Alan Nussenblatt, Pam & George Smith, Debbie & Philip Waxelbaum.

Los Angeles Jewish Symphony Conductor Noreen Green introduced the Rabin orchestral work as a "20th century masterpiece."

Notes from the Composer

On Nov. 4, 1995, Israel and the rest of the world lost not only a great leader, but a great soul. Yitzhak Rabin, I believe, was a man who promoted the idea of moving forward, and he was a man who supported the concept of change in a positive way...

Yitzhak Rabin's life achievements are undeniable, but the aspect about his life that I identified most with was not just the devotion to his country, but his loyalty and devotion to his family and friends... His constant attention and hands-on nurturing of families that lost loved ones demonstrated to me, and to the rest of the world, that he was a man of compassion as well as a man full of passion for Israel and for life.

Aaron Zigman
